Independent study: Classics 499, Readings in Greco-Roman Egypt

A.) Description

Student will prepare a series of summaries, book reviews and short essays – as well as a basic bibliography – on topics in Greco-Roman Egypt. Specific topics will be determined by student and instructor, though the focus of the course will be on Hellenistic palatial and temple architecture. Student will read textbooks, articles and other scholarship, with a view towards finding a subject for a long (ca 25pp) research paper.

B.) Text/Reading List

To be determined.

C.) Syllabus

To be determined by student and instructor.

D.) Prerequisites

None.

E.) Evidence of Concurrent Enrollment

N/A

F.) Evaluation

Majority of grade will be determined by the long research paper; response papers, bibliographies and shorter essays will constitute the remainder of the grade.
